Report: Session on 'Active Listening Skills'

According to Socrates, if both parties must be curious, courteous, and courageous in exploring the truth, the person who asks questions must also actively listen to others' viewpoints. To elucidate the significant role that listening plays during social interactions, the IQAC of HVPS's College of Law organised a lecture on 'Active Listening Skills'. The session was arranged on 2 December 2019, from 10 a.m. The lecture intended to make students understand the importance of active listening in everyday life. The students were introduced to the various barriers to effective listening and tips to overcome such barriers.

The students participated in the session and joined the discussion that followed. The lecture was organised with the support of the principal, Dr. Madhura Kalamkar. The content was designed and delivered by Ms. Asha Selvakumar.

Outcome:

The session received positive feedback from the students as it helped them understand how active listening helps enhance the quality of communication with clients and others in the legal profession. It also equipped them with measures to overcome the various barriers to listening and enhanced communication skills.
